THE AUTHOR

Ann Waterhouse started work in 1969 in the UK editorial office of an international oil magazine. A career in the media followed but the arrival of two sons gave Ann the opportunity to pursue her writing activities, initially as a hobby. Since 1994, she has been writing entertaining and informative guides to sports, aimed at parents, grandparents and friends who didn't play the sports themselves.

Dedication

This book is dedicated to that hardy band of supporters – mostly parents and grandparents – who brave all the appalling weather an average winter can throw at them to watch a bunch of grubby small boys or girls doing their best to kill each other each week (or so it seems to the uninitiated).
