Caprice — A Glamorous Erotic Series

Caprice is an erotic series that follows best friends Maren and Caprice — two journalists at Germany's biggest tabloid magazine FLASH. Reporting on events around the world, they jet-set to meet celebrities, aristocracy, and members of high society. Maren and Caprice research their stories with hard-hitting dedication and even physically involved ...

Each episode is unique: sometimes gentle and other times a little rough. Different writers ensure each story's individual flair. Since each author maintains her own writing style, Caprice is a completely new erotic experience from one glamorous event to the next.

The Author

Inka Loreen Minden, who also writes under her pseudonyms Lucy Palmer (erotic fiction) and Loreen Ravenscroft (Romantasy), is a well-known German author of erotic literature, whose books regularly appear on bestseller lists.

Main Characters

Caprice LaCroix is spontaneous, domineering, and strong-willed. She's a confident diva who's part French and doesn't hesitate to let everyone know, mon chéri. Having grown up just outside Paris, she learned to fight her way through life. It's her fight that makes her relish sticky situations. Caprice noticed early on that she could hold men in her spell. Her tenacity got her the job at FLASH. Her reporter's intuition not only leads her to exclusive and scandalous stories, but also into situations where she can live out her fantasies. Much more exciting than searching for one lone partner for life! Besides, her body is far too special to be admired by one man alone ...

Maren Janson is the yin to Caprice's yang. She's just a "naïve country girl." Or at least that's her act. The boys, with whom Maren grew up, in a small German village, experienced that first hand. After she was drawn to the big city, she landed at Germany's biggest tabloid magazine, FLASH, in Hamburg. Maren knows that her girly, naïve ways incite mens' protective instinct, and she takes advantage of this to serve her own needs. Still, one day she hopes to meet Mr. Right. But until she finds him, she likes to have her fun with the city boys ...

Caprice was so furious, she could feel her pulse violently pounding at her temples. "Your informant tipped off another magazine, as well!" she yelled into her cellphone and then resolutely snapped it shut.

"I can't believe it!" she muttered.

Walter Stein, Editor in Chief of FLASH, had gotten a hot tip two days ago: They'd get some bombastic news about the scandalous rapper Mac Teek if they came to Saint Tropez this weekend. Stein thought they could kill two birds with one stone and report on the opening of an art exhibit that was taking place there at the same time. He had put Caprice and John Feyn on the next flight to France. And who happened to cross her path at this art museum in Saint-Tropez? None other than her biggest competitor: Philipp Bergman, reporter at the X-PRESS.

"That raven haired devil," she murmured, her eyes throwing daggers in his direction, as he grinned back at her nonchalantly. This wouldn't be the first time Phil had snatched a headline from under her nose.

"Hey, sweetheart, calm down! Your face is turning the same shade of red as your sassy locks!" John ran his hand through his blonde hair. Dimples formed on his cheeks as he smiled. The photographer golden boy always seemed to be in a good mood, and thankfully it was contagious.

Caprice took a deep breath and savored the cool air on her hot skin. At times of stress she craved a cigarette, but smoking was strictly forbidden in the museum. She and her colleague had been strolling through the bright, high-ceilinged rooms of the museum- a former chapel, whose walls were covered with numerous art works, for the best part of an hour. The French painter Mondaine was exhibiting his most recent pieces, entitled 'Shadows of
