For my much missed grandad, Dave Russell, whose tales of World War II adventure I so enjoyed.

★ THE C.I.A. FILES ★

*Cows from the present -
Fighting in the past to protect the future . . .*

In the year 2550, after thousands of years of being eaten and milked, cows finally live as equals with humans in their own country of Luckyburger. But a group of evil war-loving bulls - the Fed-up Bull Institute - is not satisfied.

Using time machines and deadly ter-moo-nator agents, the F.B.I. is trying to change Earth's history. These bulls plan to enslave all humans and put savage cows in charge of the planet. Their actions threaten to plunge all cowkind into cruel and cowardly chaos . . .

The C.I.A. was set up to stop them.

However, the best agents come not from 2550 - but from the present. From a time in the early 21st century, when the first clever cows began to appear. A time when a brainy bull named Angus McMoo invented the first time machine, little realizing he would soon become the F.B.I.'s number one enemy . .

Chapter One

OFF TO WAR!

The two fighter planes circled in the sky like birds of prey. The drone of heavy engines filled the air. Then the sharp sound of gunfire rattled out. One of the planes dipped sharply to dodge the bullets . . .

“What an awesome show!” cried Pat Vine, a young bullock with white zigzags on his brown coat. Most of the time, Farmer Barmer’s farmyard was a quiet and sleepy place – but not when the air show was in town, with stunt planes flying overhead! Pat lay down in the field with his hooves behind his head, enjoying the aerial acrobatics. “These displays are brilliant, aren’t they, Bo?”

“Hmm, not bad, I suppose,” said Little Bo Vine, who was Pat’s older sister. She was sitting beside him, blowing a big gum bubble. “It would be better if the planes fired laser beams and played really cool loud music on their stereos . . .”
